By Herbert H. Denron Washington Post Service . WASHINGTON - A dissident

segment of the Libyan military aunched two assassination attempts recently against Colonel Meamer Qadhafi, who responded by executing dozens of officers, ac-gording to intelligence reports sching the U.S. government.

A coup artempt by conservative officers is said to have occurred early last month at a presidential villa outside Tripoli, the Libyan capital. The reports indicated that as many as 15 officers may have been executed in retaliation. The second attempt, reportedly Wushington Post Service SANTA BARBARA, California - President Ronald Reagan, who declined to visit the site of a Nazi concentration camp during his visit to West Germany in May, has decided to lay a wreath at a German war cemetery where many Nazi sol-diers, were buried following the Battle of the Bulge, the White Meuse has announced.

Outlining the itinerary for Mr. Reagan's European trip April 30 to May 10, the White House said Thursday that the president will visit the German Military Cemetery at Bitburg, West Germany, on May 5 as part of a West German plotters thought Colonel Qadhafi was traveling is said to have taken place within the last two weeks and to have resulted in the execution of at least 60 more officers accused of conspiring in the plot.

Unlike an attempted coup last May, which was led by exiled Qa-dhali opponents who had infiltrated into Libya, the two reported efforts appear to have been carried out by conservative officers in the 73,000-member Libyan armed forces. It was not clear whether the apparent dissatisfaction with Colonel Qadhafi is widespread.

According to these reports, the attacks and executions have been kept secret inside Libya. The public hanging of two Tripoli University students last year stirred open dis-sent among the thousands of students forced to watch the executions. Two persons who participated in the hangings were later found slain.

Opposition from a segment of the Libyan military is believed to be the outcome of a power struggle pitting comparatively moderate military officers and career civil servants against the extremist Revolutionary Committees, on which Colonel Qadhali has increasingly relied since the failed coup last

According to the intelligence reports, responsibility for patrolling the border with Tunisia has been taken over by members of the Revolutionary Committees through which Colonel Qadhafi rules. The belief in Washington is that the military officers involved may have felt that this was their last chance before being totally eclipsed by the radical committees. Colonel Qadhafi has sought to build a military force made up of the radicals as a counter to the professional armed forces, saying the regular army should be dis-banded eventually. The armed forces are widely believed to represent the only serious threat to Colonel Qadhaff's rule. U.S. and foreign analysts in Washington say that Colonel Qadhafi has been suspicious of the professional military since an attempt on his life by officers several years ago. He then turned to the East Germans to create his personal security force.

close for an hour, police said. The closure of New Tokyo International Airport at Narita. 40 miles (64 kilometers) northeast of the capital, caused 15 flights to be diverted to Haneda airport in southern Tokyo, police said.

U.S. Agrees to Meeting On Monetary Reform

PARIS - The United States, seeking to resolve a conflict with the European Community on the linkage of trade and monetary is-sues, said Friday that it would be willing to organize a conference of industrialized countries later this year to consider reforming the international monetary system.

The United States won agreement Friday for the organizing of a preparatory meeting on trade liberalization before the end of the summer. The Reagan administration has been seeking a conference on trade to begin next year. Friday's accord, however, omitted any agreement on a date for the confer-ence and any mention of linkage between trade reform and mone-

The announcement, made at the end of a two-day conference of the OECD, including 24 countries in North America, Western Europe and the Pacific area, was immediately termed positive by Finance Minister Pierre Beregovoy of France and other European officials. France has been the leader in the EC's insistence that monetary reform accompany the negotiations on trade liberalization sought by the United States.

By John M. Berry

Washington Post Service PRINCETON, New Jersey -Secretary of State George P. Shultz has proposed a "program of inter-national action" to protect the world economic recovery, with the major U.S. contribution to be a reduction in its budget deficit.

In a speech that was less optimistic than past administration pronouncements, Mr. Shultz said Thursday that there were important links between U.S. economic problems — specifically, that the federal budget deficit is a reason for the nation's record trade deficit, the high value of the dollar and a large inflow of foreign capital.

The growth of imports also "is spurring protectionist demands for tariffs, nontariff barriers and export subsidies," Mr. Shultz said. ### Many Shoppers Say American Goods, When Available, Are 'a Bit Rough'

New York Times Service TOKYO - Chieko Kunimitsu, examining Tiffany rings at a department store, was asked to describe her image of U.S. products.

"I'm sorry to say this," Mrs. Kunimitsu replied, "but I think they are a bit rough. When I choose clothes, I look for details such as how the hems are sewn, and Japanese manufacturers seem to pay more attention. This perception of questionable U.S. quality, which is a perception confirmed in market studies here, is dismissed as unfair by U.S. manufacturers. They insist that there are many cases in which the quality of U.S. goods is higher than the Japanese version, but that entry to the Japanese market is barred. Therein lies the challenge for U.S. companies that want to persuade the Japanese to spend more on U.S. merchandise than the $27 billion they spent last year. If the companies can get their goods to market in Japan. they still have to overcome the widespread impression that Americans just do not make products as well as the Japanese do.

The Japanese government, responding to U.S. accusations of protectionism, introduced a package of measures this week to make the Japanese market more accessible to imports. Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone Noriko Onishi, a shopper. "For example, i added a personal push with a television appeal to the Japanese people to buy more foreign products.

He also called on department stores and corporations to purchase more imported At the Takashimaya department store in Tokyo, lchiko Ishihara, a managing director

This is in response, she said, to Mr. Nakasone's calculation that if each of Japan's 120 million citizens bought $100 of goods made abroad, Japanese imports would increase by $12 billion. It would help narrow the United States deficit in trade with Japan, a record $37 billion last year,

Reducing the deficit does not seem easy. For example, when the Japanese buy consumer goods, which account for only 6 percent of American exports to Japan, they tend to prefer domestic brands.

"I mostly buy Japanese products," said tend to be conservative about cosmetics because I worry they will make me sick, and I feel that foreign cosmetic products have a scent that is too strong for the Japanese."

Roosevelt Remembered: Soviet Nostalgia

By Seth Mydans
New York Times Service
MOSCOW — In Yalta, where the wartime allies met to map the future, there is no street named for Stalin or for Churchill, But treelined Roosevelt Street, which runs into Lenin Square, is a favorite for strollers near the harbor.

Franklin D. Roosevelt has always held a special place for Russians among U.S. presidents, and just ahead of the 40th anniversary of his death Friday, commentaries in the Soviet press asked the ques-tion, "What if he had lived longer?"

Through the prism of time, the Russians see a man who embodied some of their ideals for Soviet-American relations, a statesman portrayed as approaching the world in much the same way as the current Soviet leader, Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

For many Russians, the name of Roosevelt evokes nostalgia for a wartime alliance in which they feel they were treated as equal partners.

Weighing into the American debate on whether he was too soft on the Russians and gave away too much to Stalin in postwar agreements, Soviet commentators have only praise for his "realism" and

"Roosevelt, undoubtedly, was a politician of world caliber, a true patriot of America and a convinced

New Swiss Highway Toll Is Taxing Liechtenstein

The Associated Press VADUZ, Liechtenstein - Traffic through this tiny principality, already dense, has risen as many foreign motorists seek to avoid paying a new toll on superhighways in Switzerland, police say.

The traffic was especially heavy to and from southern Switzerland or Italy last weekend and has touched off protests from residents, said Fridolin Meier, chief of the Liechtenstein traffic police, on Wednesday. Switzerland imposed a 30-franc ($11.30) levy on all users of its four-lane superhighways on champion of cooperation with the Soviet Union," wrote Valentin Ber-ezhkov, editor of the journal was an interpreter at meetings be-tween Stalin and Roosevelt, and by the Pacific war with Japan. a Tass press agency analyst, Igor Orlov, portrayed Roosevelt as a man who sounded uncannily like fied, and in their final form they Mr. Gorbachev.

According to them, Roosevelt Eastern Europe and led to accusa-was a champion of peaceful coexis-tions that the Western governments tence, a course that Mr. Gorbachev told a group of U.S. congressmen this week is "the sole sensible alternative in this nuclear age." He is portrayed as understanding that confrontation is not "a natural state of relations between the two great powers," a key idea that Mr. Gorbachev has been repeating.

Roosevelt is also said to have championed the notions, often heard in the Soviet Union these days, that relations must be conducted on a basis of equality, that political will is a key ingredient for progress and that "frank and iendly talks" can be fruitful. The praise for Roosevelt contrasts with the tone taken in commentaries about the current U.S. president, who is chided for seeking to gain superiority over the Soviet Union and to operate from a position-of-strength policy.

A separate Tass commentary on Thursday said President Reagan was "unwilling to do anything that would really contribute to improving the international situation."

It added: "Throughout the postwar years, the United States has failed to undertake a single action that could be assessed as practical confirmation" that it wants to reduce nuclear weapons.

When Roosevelt first met Stalin at the Tehran conference in 1943, Mr. Berezhkov said, they came together as old friends on the basis of an almost-daily correspondence for which he had acted as translator.

Some Worthy Causes For Tax Check-Offs

In 1967 the federal government gave taxpayers the option signating one tax dollar on their income tax forms to fund presidential election campaigns. Now 34 states have followed suit, and by checking off boxes on their state income tax forms, taxpayers can donate money to a good cansa, either to be deducted from refunds or added to tax liability.

Wildlife conservation is the most common checkoff, used by 31 out of 34 states, the Los Angeles Times reports. Eight states have checkoffs for child abuse prevention funds and five for the U.S. Olympic Committee Other causes include arts subsidies or veterans' homes.

"You'd think people would really be surly by the time they get to the end of their tax forms," said Helen Adorjan, spokesman for the Illinois Department of Revenue, but we get a lot of money." Why the Very Rich Rule the TV Roost

Television's "Dallas" and "Dynasty" already are legends in the United States and are among the best-known American exports. Why? The New York Times has asked experts in various fields. Esther Shapiro, who produces "Dynasty" with her husband Richard, says it's part of the social evolution. "I wore granny dresses in the 1960s," she adds, "I felt like dressing up again,"

Malcolm Forbes, publisher of Forbes magazine, ascribes it to the changed economic climate of the Reagan era: "There is an awareness of business, or the consequence of corporate raids" featured in both programs. "More people are more interest-ed in the rich," be says. "There are so many more of us now."

"A kind of vulgar Marxism," offers Herbert J. Gans, a professor of sociology at Columbia University in New York. The programs "are about new money behaving grossly," he said, and feed "what a lot of people do believe, the notion that this country is run for the benefit of a small number."

Shultz Speaks His Mind

American secretaries of state are not normally noted for understanding economic problems. It just so happens today that George Shultz is the best economist in official Washington. At a time when most of America's economic top brass were in Europe, embroiled in complex negotiations leading up to the May summit in Bonn, Mr. Shultz spoke his mind in a reasonable tone at Princeton University. One recalls George Marshall's speech at Harvard in 1947. University gatherings can be occasions for major constructive suggestions.

Observers outside the United States will doubtless be tempted to concentrate on the Shultz analysis of the imbalances that currently hang over the American economy. Certainly his words give the lie to some of the less prudent remarks that have come out of Washington disclaiming any link between the monumental federal budget deficit on the one hand and the high real interest rate and the uncomfortable strength of the dollar on the other. But there are more important messages for the rest of the world in the Shultz statement.

First, his speech chimes well with the thoughtful analysis that the OECD staff presented to governments in Paris this week: Protectionist barriers to trade seldom hardly ever - give any country the boost to its economy and jobs that their proponents say they will. They usually lead to selfinflicted wounds that damage labor and business in general without conferring any lasting benefit on particular sectors thought to be threatened by imports. Protection, says the OECD, is a blunt instrument. Its effects on America and the whole world, says Mr. Shultz, would be devastating.

Second, Mr. Shultz rejects the thesis that the dollar can be cheapened and stabilized by official intervention in the world currency markets. We have already expressed skep-

Is Chile going back to the death squads?

Seven political opponents of the Pinochet re-ticism (IHT, April 9) concerning the claim, which the European Community has felt obliged to put forward, that trade barriers cannot be broken down in the absence of parallel negotiations for international monetary reform. The sad probability is that if new trade negotiations have to proceed hand-in-hand with monetary talks, we shall never get anywhere on trade. Experience suggests that parallel talks, involving different sets of government experts, move at the pace of the slowest, which in the case of the present proposal would be very slow. We do not want a two-ring circus.

But where Secretary Shultz really scores is in explaining the need for joint international action to sustain economic growth — the main objective and the key to success. He pleads, as the essential counterpart to a U.S. effort to dispel the clouds approaching the American economy, for more convergent policies on the part of Europe and Japan to sustain world recovery, without which it will surely prove impossible to keep trade barriers and the resulting depression at bay.

This approach seems to be reflected in this week's OECD compromise solution: a monetary conference that would, in American eyes, look at convergence of policies more than at technical reform.

It makes clear sense to argue that the time is past when Europe and Japan should rely on exports to the United States to keep their economies moving. They have, in varying degrees, scope to encourage spending inside their own economies now. If America is to temper the stimulus that its deficits have imparted to the rest of the world in recent years - an essential action if America itself is not to overreach -other countries need to step in to keep world demand moving. The forthcoming summit will prove a disaster if

As Reagan's Men Huddled, Gorbachev Scored First

By Joseph Kraft

View down the gun barrel.

WASHINGTON — Does it mat-ter that President Reagan does not know very much about arms control? The populist view says: "No. As long as he's in touch with basic American values, he can make the big decisions and delegate the rest." But the latest Big Two exchanges teach a different lesson. The Reagan administration overreacted in a negative way to a Soviet move on disarmament because Mr. Reagan has been unable to wring a coherent position from his advisers. For the same reason, he has now put in for two rounds of summitry with the new Soviet leader, Mikhail Gorbachev.

Mr. Gorbachev made his move in a Tass interview broadcast over Soviet television on Easter Sunday. He announced a freeze until November on deployment of Soviet SS-20s aimed at Western Europe. He called on the United States to stop deploying analogous weapons — the Tomahawk cruise and Pershing-2 ballistic missiles — in Western Europe. He suggested a moratorium on research into ballistic missile defense — the socalled "star wars" project. He hinted that a summit, while agreed upon in principle, would depend on a positive response from the United States.

The Reagan administration gave him the back of its hand, over and over and over again. The freeze proposal was denounced in a formal White House statement, in a formal State Department comment and in separate television interviews by National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane (twice), Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Deputy Secretary of State Kenneth Dam.

The White House statements likened the freeze announcement to a move by Leonid Brezhnev and called it a "discredited proposal." Every-body said it was "disappointing" to have Moscow making propaganda instead of addressing itself to serious business at the Geneva talks or in preparations for the summit. The freeze, it was said, would only perpetuate a lopsided Soviet advantage in medium-range missiles in Europe.

There is indeed a lot wrong with the Gorbachev gambit. It does per-petuate a large Soviet advantage in Europe. It was timed to boost Easter peace demonstrations in West Germany. The freeze expires at just the time the Netherlands will be going through the tricky politics of voting on deployment of U.S. missiles.

on deployment of U.S. missiles.

But the allusion to the Brezhnev proposal rings hollow. In 1982, when Mr. Brezhnev spoke of a "freeze." no new U.S. medium-range had been deployed in Europe. The United States has now deployed 54 (out of a projected 103) Pershing-2s and 48 (out of a projected 464) Tomahawks.

So the true meaning of the "freeze" spatial is that the Soviet Union second gambit is that the Soviet Union accepts the positioning of new medium-range U.S. missiles in Western Europe. That is a long way from the refusal to accept any, which prompt-ed both the Brezhnev "freeze" and the walkout from Geneva talks under Yuri Andropov in November 1983. Having made that basic concession, moreover, Mr. Gorbachev can go on to sweeten the pot in ways that are increasingly appealing to West Europeans. He can revive the "walk in the woods" accord proposed by Paul Nitze, then a U.S. negotiator and now chief adviser in the State Department, whereby the United States would scrap all Pershing-2 missiles and both sides would cut back to 75 launchers. That proposal - rejected by the United States - appealed to almost all Europeans.

He can also continue to mobilize opinion against the "star wars" research project. Because Mr. Reagan and Mr. Weinberger have sold "star wars" as a way to make nuclear weapons obsolete, the project has seriously worried Europe, where the fear is that America is abandoning deterrence to leave the allies on their own.

And Mr. Gorbachev can continue to dangle prospects for a summit. He apparently did that on Wednesday in the nearly four-hour meeting he had with House Speaker Tip O'Neill and a congressional delegation. Mr. O'Neill delivered on behalf of Mr. Reagan a letter reiterating interest in a summit. Even though Mr. O'Neill raised the question of human rights, citing various prisoners, the "vibes" of the session were said to be "good."

Compared to the easy track that stretches out before Mr. Gorbachev, Mr. Reagan's looks rocky. His advisers are at sixes and sevens. Mr. Reagan and most of his White House advisers want to emphasize the sum-mit. The Defense Department harbors doubts about the summit and is even more wary of the Geneva arms control talks. Secretary of State George Shultz, while hopeful for Geneva, believes that, for bargaining purposes, the White House has over-committed itself on the summit. Settling these differences requires choices difficult even for a leader deep into detail. Since Mr. Reagan is not versed in arms control, he avoids making the choices. So, in response to the Gorbachev gambit the administration holed up in negative positions that lead nowhere. As to the summit, the White House tried to marry the views of different advisers by pingging for a "get acquainted" meeting, as well as a well-prepared, substantive session later on.

Thus, failure to go deeply into arms control carries costs that are now becoming apparent. The United States looks inflexible on substance and confused on atmospherics.

To Fuel Summitry, Try Fusion Energy

By Flora Lewis

ATLANTA — They will, they won't, they will, they won't ... Soviet and American leaders have been backing around each other for years on the matter of whether or not to meet, and on what terms.

Despite the latest flurry of "clarifications" from Presimeet Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev this year. The Russians have not ruled out a session at the United Nations this fall. The signs are that Mr. Gorbachev's missile freeze proposal is not a condition but a message that Moscow wants to raise important issues and will not be satisfied with a mere protocol encounter.

Soviet officials attending the Carter Center's Consulta-tion on International Security and Arms Control indicate in Atlanta that Moscow's main concern is to thaw what Mr. Gorbachev has called the recent "ice age" in Soviet-American relations. Washington is worried about the propaganda effects if expectations for a new East-West spring in September are raised by too much fanfare.

Both sides are maneuvering, testing the atmosphere and looking for something they could take home as an achievement without paying important concessions. This is natural and should not be written off with cynicism. The Geneva arms talks only opened last month. They cannot be expected to produce anything substantive until there has been a lot more probing. Even the notion of a freeze is much more complicated than it sounds, involving intricate definitions as well as questions of principle.

But a howdy-doody summit meeting, adorned perhaps with minor accords on fishing and ballet, would scarcely slake the yearning for evidence that the superpowers are veering off collision course. Like supertankers, it takes them a long time to complete a turn.

What matters is a clear direction. Simply talking "man to man" does not necessarily provide it, or assure better understanding. The important thing is to bring a sense of engagement in a search for ways to make the world safer and better off, a signal that something worthwhile has been started. As it happens, there is a good possibility that would serve everyone's interest but has been overlooked in the focus on difficult military issues.

An excellent candidate for an exciting, constructive accord would be a program for fusion energy.

Although fusion is the principle of the hydrogen bomb, it has no other military applications. Unlike existing nuclear fission reactors, fusion plants would present aldent Reagan's entourage on when a summit conference is most ino risk of accident and dangerous waste products. The fuel is hydrogen, abundant in the sea. If it can be brought to economic viability, fusion energy would provide unlimited prospects of development to all, and relief from atmospheric pollution by heavy use of coal and oil.

Fusion research has been plodding along for more than 30 years, but there has been progress. Says Marshall
Rosenbluth, a pioneer who heads the Institute for Fusion

Studies at the University of Texas, "We can now feel very confident about the prospects." But, as he puts it, to solve remaining problems "will require a large-scale effort, perhaps too difficult and expensive for any one nation."

America is spending only $400 million a year on this immensely promising new resource—the cost of less than half a dozen missiles in the MX program. The Soviet Union, the European Community and Japan have ad-vanced research efforts. All have been exchanging information freely, even in the worst of times, because nobody can be hurt by progress toward this scientific miracle. So fusion energy offers a long-term, highly rewarding peaceful enterprise for Soviet-American cooperation, tother with Europe and Japan. It would be as dramatic a token of intentions as the defunct Soviet-American space program, and a lot more useful and enduring. Evgenii Velikhov, who heads fusion research at Moscow's Kurchatov Institute, says a demonstration plant could be built within a decade to test engineering ideas, at a cost of about $2 billion. Mr. Velikhov, a participant in the Atlanta consultation, believes that the Russians would be glad to join an international effort.

Secretary of State George Shultz and Foreign Minister

Andrei Gromyko will meet in Vienna next mouth to discuss a summit conference. Putting a fusion program on the agenda would not avert the abrasive issues but it would promise at least one important success and bright-en the horizon for the tougher talks.

lesson of the Vietnam experience. That lesson has to do with free expression, public trust and the imperative for mobilizing a degree of effective congressional support.
Leave aside Mr. Kissinger's analysis of how the war went wrong: a flawed strategy of attrition and gradual escalation unsuited to guerolla warfare; a traditional American inability to understand why you cannot bomb and talk at the same time; a collapse of public support starting with "fringe" groups seeking "radical transformations of society"; a divisive Congress carrying dissent to ex-cess; the ravages of Watergate; and of course, the media.

Leave aside, as well, no more than you would expect expect in the way of scapegoating, self-serving and se-lective recall. The rule holds for statesmen defending their failed ven-tures: Being involved means not have on the contrary, like Richard Nix-on in his latest book ("No More Viet-nams"). Mr. Kissinger insists that the Vietnam War could have been brought off with success and honor - and indeed that it was. But the "rewards and penalties so painfully assembled" to enforce the Paris peace accords of January 1973 were "sys! tematically dismantled" when a distrustful and irresolute Congress, in June of that same year, prohibited resumption of U.S. military action in, over or near Indochina and slashed aid to South Vietnam.

Mr. Kissinger fails to remind us that those peace accords hung together on a secret "side letter" from Mr. Nixon to South Victnamese Presi dent Nguyen Van Thieu promising swift U.S. re-entry into the fray if the North Vietnamese broke the truce That was a promise Mr. Nixon could not have hoped to deliver on, given the state of the congressional revolt.

Mr. Kissinger says simply that "the United States owed the peoples of Indochina a decent opportunity for survival [but] its domestic divisions made it impossible for the United States to pay this debt."

Now that may have been the case

Now that may have been the case by the time Mr. Nixon and Mr. Kissinger took charge — depending on how you define "decent." But what are the lessons? Mr. Kissinger starts out sensibly. Prevention is the best cure for guertilla war, meaning generous programs of aid and reform. Failing pre-emption, U.S. combat troops should not be committed without a "clear understanding of the nature of - after which there can be no alternative to achieving those objectives. Finally, Mr. Kissinger insists that "a democracy cannot conduct a serious policy if the contending factions do not exercise some restraint in their debate." That is where the reach exceeds the grasp: Where do you draw the restraining line and who draws it. Congress or the executive?

The only answer I can see is that both, by their own behavior, most practice and thus encourage restraint. Mr. Kissinger gives no answer. But a hint as to where he thinks blame lies appears when he says the "vaunted credibility gap" was a media creation, fabricated by harping on the "differences between governmental states ments and what in fact happened." He goes on: "A fairer analysis would have sought to determine what was due to genuine confusion and what was actual misrepresentation." He has it all backward. The confusion was not the government's but that of the public and Congress born of the government's misrepre-sentations. They are too plentiful to bear recital — misrepresentations all through the record about the mission of the first combat troops in Vietnam about the numbers that would subse quently be needed, about the objective. I do not mean miscalculations; I mean conscious deception. The Pentagon Papers include documents establishing artful dissembling as $45 matter of executive policy.

As for the differences between statements and what happened, why should promises unmatched by performance not lead legitimately to a loss of credibility? How many lights; after all, were we shown at the end of how many tunnels? However honest how many tunnels? However honest the misjudgments, repeated progress reports that turn out to be empty are the natural breeding ground for the distrust and domestic division that Mr. Kissinger so deeply deplores.
Given the problem of conducting war "amid such passions by himself," Mr. Kissinger argues, Mr. Nowa, "should have gone to Congress early in his term, outlined his strategy and demanded an endorsement. Failing demanded an endorsement. Failing that he should have liquidated the war." But Mr. Nixon rejected that advice, fearing that history would hever forgive the appalling consequences" of such an "abdication of executive responsibility."

Mr. Kissinger still seems to think that President Nixon made the wrong decision. Mr. Kissinger is right on one point. "America owes it to itself to make a fair assessment of the lessons of that tragedy." he says, but sons of that tragerly," he says, but "that has not yet occurred."

Brazil is sturdy thanks to a long tradi-tion of effective political brokerage, producing much harmony and compromise; sturdy also thanks to an experienced cadre of civil servants, technologically skilled and administratively competent. But it is weak because of the recent disintegration of a bankrupt and demoralized military government; and weak because the democracy that most Brazilians want has yet to be constructed.

Tancredo Neves was chosen by the old system to usher in the new. In a 50-year career, he established himself as a liberal whose moderation comforts conservatives and generals and as a democrat whose principles appeal to populists and radicals. He was to be inaugurated

Acid Rain: Better Call In the Shrinks

WASHINGTON — Look at the rosters of specialists studying the acid rain problem and you will find what you might expect: biochemists, forestry scientists, meteorologists and the like. But recent political events demonstrate that they are the appears of the special political countries do not claim that all the needed knowledge is in. But, just as specialists are the state of the specialists. strate that they are the wrong spe-cialists. Acid rain needs psychia-trists, especially those who treat reality denial and ballucinations.

The reality, after nearly a decade of scientific study, is that acid rain is killing vast tracts of forest and poisoning thousands of lakes in North America and Europe.

The hallucination, endemic among politicians, is that further scientific study will tell us some-thing of value that we do not know. That new knowledge, they wistfully hope, will permit a low-cost, polincally simple solution to a spreading ecological disaster that is rousing great concern on both continents.

There is no doubt that more research needs to be done. On that basis there is some justification for the agreement recently struck between President Ronald Reagan and Prime Minister Brian Mulroney for joint research on acid rain. Still, the Canadian leader and his people got taken by that old snake oil — "more research."

Few problems would not benefit from more research. What is needed is decisive action against the well-known acid rain sources that cancer is often successfully treated in the absence of full scientific understanding, so, they justifiably in-sist, enough is understood at this point to apply effective remedies.

What they see, after years of careful research, is that much of the acid rain problem comes from the tailpipes of cars and the smokestacks of coal-burning industries. Both sources can be reduced or even eliminated by emission con-trols. That calls for political will, which is in short supply in countries where it is needed most. West Germany's neighbors in the European Community are sympa-thetic about the spreading destruc-tion of trees in the ancient Black Forest, but not so sympathetic as to be willing to speed up requirements for automotive emission controls. Bonn wants to mandate controls by 1988 to reduce the automotive nitrous oxides, from near and far, that are the source of the nitric acid that is wilting its forests. Although the other countries are also victims of acid rain destruction, they prefer less stringent controls and a 1994 deadline for all cars. The Reagan administration, alrecommended emission controls on coal-burning plants in the Midwest. Research costs a few millions: emission controls cost billions. The choice is clear — except that acid rain also costs billions, and the end of those costs cannot be forecast if the problem continues.

though urged to action by scientists

Given the huge costs of a clean-up, would it not be prudent to wait for research that might eliminate some of the unknowns about the biochemical processes of acid rain? The Congressional Office of Technology Assessment examined that issue and emphatically concluded that delay may be disastrous. Enough is known, it declared, to get started on what may well be a decade-long cleanup effort. It pointed out that the four-to-six-year research effort that scientists advise would be completed before the cleanup program reaches the stage of major expenditures. The two-pronged approach would as-stare a fast start and would minimize the chance of costly misdirection. It makes sense, but the Reagan administration is not listening. Acid rain is beyond science and politics. Call in the shrinks.

LETTERS A Moral Role at Dachau

In response to "Why Reagan Truly Should Visit Dachau" (April 6):

Charles Williams Maynes's point about the American presidency being "pre-eminently a place of moral lead-"pre-eminently a place of moral lead-ership" is eminently right, even if that sound maxim came from a president co-responsible for Yalta. Poles — who were the first to oppose Hitler and who became, next to the Jews and the Russians, the main victims of Nazi fury — would be grateful for an act of presidential moral leadership that the world much needs.

A Noble Freeze Spurned

I was so impressed with the Soviet Union's decision unilaterally to suspend deployment of their missiles that I decided to make a similar noble gesture. I wrote to the tax authorities in my country to announce that I had decided unilaterally to renounce my right to any and all monies they owed me and to say that I hoped they would, in the same spirit, no longer demand any money from me.

Imagine my disappointment when the tax authorities accused me of trying to freeze an advantageous posi-tion, since they owed me nothing. They continued to insist that I pay my taxes. Such cynicism! I know how Mikhail Gorbachev must feel. Noble gestures just don't pay these days. JOHN HIGGS.

stance. Greece and Yugoslavia, which border Albania, and Italy, whose boot's beel faces it across the Adriatic Sea, had a fair idea of what they were facing. Their policies toward this most uncomfortable neighbor rested on one consoling factor: Albania's hostility to the Soviet Union.

The small and mountainous Balkan nation of about three million people is aggressively isolationist not hesitating to fire across its land or sea horders at any real or imagned intruder.

It is an unsatisfactory trading partner, paranoically suspicious of foreigners to the extent of refusing foreign credits under a provision in its constitution. It represses its eth-aic minorities, particularly the circelts, and has carried hostility to religion to the point of outlawing it. But under Mr. Hoxha, who died

Thursday aged 76, Albania's neighbors have enjoyed the certainty of having to face an unallied and friendless country as weak and alone as it is fierce. Mr. Hoxha made his a nation as bostile to the Soviet Union as it is to the West, and, since the mid-1970s, he made it an enemy also to its last remaining friend, China.

Under his brutally dictatorial rule, there was certainty that Moscow could not establish a foothold on the Adriatic, a fear that haunted Yugoslavia and gave concern to the North Atlantic Treaty Organiza-tion, of which Greece and Italy are

Mr. Hoxba's regime gradually reduced this fear as he eliminated, usually by execution, anyone suspected of being a real or potential agent of any foreign power or a potential rival to the leader. The latest and most important victim was Mehmet Shehu, the prime minister and No. 2 in power until he was killed in December 1981.

The best hopes in this region and in the West lie in the fact that the Hoxha purges, a permanent feature of his rule, may have been thorough enough to have removed any threat to the continuity of his foreign poli-of "Albania watchers," analysts who rely largely on the reporting of the few embassies in Tirana none of which have good government contacts -- and close exegesis of the Albanian press and broadcasts, have come to believe that continuity under collegial rule is most likely.

Ramiz Alia, who as president of the Presidium of the People's Assembly is head of state, is expected to head a ruling group distin-guished above all for its loyalty to the late leader and his policies.

In the last years of his rule, Mr. Hoxha had begun what appeared to be a slow but discernible process of replacing his abandoned reliance on economic cooperation with China with expanded dealings with the West. These increasing contacts were almost exclusively economic, however, and accompanied by undiminished fervor in anti-Western

Such gams were quietly encour aged by Yugoslavia, Greece, Italy, West Germany and France, for political as well as economic reasons. The United States, however, has never succeeded in obtaining even an indirect hearing for its occasional bids to improve relations.

Greece has opened two road border crossings to its neighbor, but their value remains symbolic be-cause Albania welcomes almost no visitors and rarely allows its own people to travel. Albania has completed a rail link to the Yugoslav border, while Yugoslavia is working on its stretch of track, to be ready by the end of this year.

Italy has signed an expanded trade agreement and opened a ferry link, which remains a losing operation for lack of traffic.

in the months in which Mr. Hoxha's health was clearly declining and his expected death became a factor in policy planning. Western analysts had hoped that these possibilities of beneficial links with the West might tempt the future leaders of Europe's most underdeveloped and poorest nation.

What the analysts feared in the outlook for post-Hoxha Albania was a possibility that rivalries might develop within the ruling group under Mr. Alia and that such contests might reopen a crack that the Soviet Union could exploit. Albania's long history of vicious internal power struggles, always set-tled by force, make this a realistic

The funeral in the black township of Kwanobuhle is expected to be the largest in recent years for victims of the struggle against white-minority rule.

Singapore Adjusts to 'Multiparty' Rule Televised Parliamentary Debate May Be an Eye-Opener

By Barbara Crosserre New York Times Service SINGAPORE - Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew has made politics interesting again in Singapore, although probably not in a way he intended Mr. Lee, who called an election in December after staging a series of events celebrating the accomolishments of his People's Action Party in its 25 years in power, discovered when the ballots were counted that many voters took a different view of a quarter-century of one-party dominance. Two opposition candidates won seats and the ruling party's majorities were cut in many other constituencies. In any other country with a parliamentary system, a sweep of all but two seats of the 79 in the legislature might have been thought a resounding victory, but not in Sin-

Mr. Lee Kuan Yew's reaction was that it was a complete defeat for the PAP," said J.B. Jeyaretnam, one of the two opposition members

"The old boy is still very much in charge," he said. "New revenue measures they have proposed were ideal measures for discussion. Was there any discussion? Not at all."

Mr. Lee recently added fuel to the debate on Singapore's future with a sustained attack in Parliament on "Western" values, under whose umbrella he lumped birthcontrol pills, U.S. libel suits and Indian political practices.

The prime minister, a Britisheducated barrister who once called himself Harry Lee, has drawn closer in recent public statements to a strong belief in traditional Chinese values. In March, he told Parliament that Singapore's political system had been a success because its people were overwhelmingly ethnic Chinese

"Had the mix in Singapore been different," he said, "had it been 75 percent Indians, 15 percent Malays and the rest Chinese, it would not have worked."

Singaporeans can now watch outbursts from their prime minister and his equally scrappy colleagues on television. Live broadcasts from Parliament began a few weeks ago.

This has been a tranmatic eve-opener to all Singaporeans," said Chiam See Tong, the other opposition member of Parliament. Hawkers, taxi drivers, factory workers hadn't got a clue what Parliament is. They think it is like a court where everything is solemn,

Now, Singaporeans will get a chance to see how "the government goes out of its way to ridicule us, using half-truths, untruths and lies," he said. They will see who is right and who is wrong."

One of Parliament's more bothy debated issues this year has been the government's entry into the romance business

Alarmed that graduate women were not getting married, the government set up a "social development" unit to help foster romance. The government suggested that men with university degrees were rejecting intelligent women in favor of more docile and physically attractive uneducated women, a frame of mind that Mr. Lee called appropriate only for "agricultural"

The government has strenuously defended its matchmaking office against those who suggest that it is still another case of social engineering intended to reshape society. A previous measure, which would have given preference in getting into the better schools to children of women with degrees, came under fire and was scrapped.

Many educated Singaporean women say they have no intention of marrying in a hurry, if at all, because the society is still far from enlightened in its treatment of

Above all, MOCA has a constituency. More than 250,000 people have visited the Temporary Contemporary. There are 16,000 people who pay $35 a head for annual membership. The endowment is pushing the $15-million mark.

William F. Kieschnick, president of Atlantic Richfield Co. and chairman of MOCA, has in more senses than one the touch of gold when it comes to the museum's affairs. Nor did it hurt that the J. Paul Getty Trust not long ago gave MOCA a grant of $3 million.

The current situation of MOCA, whose director is Richard Koshaek, is summed up in an exhibition that opened Feb. 13. The immediate attraction of the show is the group of 80 major works from the collection of Count and Countess Giuseppe Panza di Biumo, ac-quired by the museum in 1984 for $9 million, payable over 11 years. Impressive in itself, the purchase is indicative of the general policy MOCA intends to follow. Where other museums get a bit of this and a bit of that, as best they can, it is the grand design of MOCA that, like the Stedelijk Museum in Am-sterdam and the Saatchi collection

What we can see of the Panzas' collection, at MOCA through Sept. 29, speaks well for their judgment, which was applied to work not yet hallowed by time. Put together be-tween 1956 and 1963, the group includes work by Mark Rothko, Franz Kline, Robert Rauschenberg, Roy Lichtenstein, Claes Oldenburg, James Rosenquist and George Segal, among Americans, and by Jean Fautrier and Antoni large paintings by Rothko are the earliest American works in the show. They speak for a period when terminal melancholy had not yet begun to eat away at the artist, and in the finely adjusted light of the Temporary Contemporary they come across with an almost scraphic radiance. The Lichtensteins — a smaller, tauter group — all come from 1962, and they include such key works as "Cezanne," "Desk Calendar" and "Meat." After almost 25 years, these paintings have a spare, blunt, uncompromising quality that has lost none of its Rosenquist is represented by eight large paintings, done between 1960 and 1964. The landscape called "Capillary Action" and the phantomatic sky-piece called "Noon" should revise the opinions even of those who have long looked hard at Rosenquist. Finally, there are two sculptures from the period when Segal was pioneering the Ed-ward Hopper look and the Edward Hopper subject matter in a medium peculiar to himself. now encompasses the most rarefied aspects of art, previously of interest only to a handful of specialists.

The new interest is increasingly making itself felt in the media where art is becoming news and has left a deep imprint on publishing. A new generation of art books has sprung up. The '60s were given to broad generalities — such as "Flemish Painting" or "Islamic Art." The '80s are the age of narrow focusing. The auction houses have been the spearhead of the new trend, with Sotheby's taking the lead and spawning a new publishing house, Philip Wilson Publishers. It is bringing out titles that would have been anthinkable in tie's.

A typical instance is "Deccani Painting" by Mark Zebrowski. The lavishly illustrated book covers the school of miniature painting on paper that developed in the Islamic and Hindu circles of the central Indian region under the impact of Iranian cultural influence. The book is a rewrite of a doctoral dissertation, hence the joint participa-tion of Philip Wilson Publishers and the University of California. Last year, Philip Wilson, the son of the late Peter Wilson, the man who built Sotheby's into a world giant, went one step further in the way of rarified scholarly publishing. He published the catalogue raisonne of Baron Hans Heinrich Thyssen-Bornemisza's collection of Renaissance and Baroque objets d'art. The authors are Anna Somers Cocks, an assistant keeper at the Victoria and Albert Museum, and Charles Truman, formerly attached to the museum and now an expert for Sotheby's competitor- Chris-an even bigger plunge — the inte-gral publication of the Chinese porcelain collections in the Topkapi palace in Istanbul. These are major collections. In some areas such as Ming blue and white, they provide, together with the collections in the Tehran museum, much of the dat-ing evidence that has allowed modern scholars to build up chronological charts. Many pieces are of stunning beauty. But no publisher would have dreamed of giving the collections of one museum three volumes, with 4,500 plates, to be priced as a set at $695.

The movement toward highly sophisticated art publishing is now spreading to the Middle East. In Kuwait, two young businessmen, Harvard-trained Samir al Khannashet and Usama al Kaukji, inspired by the hobby of a collector friend, Jasem al Humayzi, set up a pub-lishing company called TRL Its purpose is to produce the most rarified class of art books - facsimiles in an area of the world where the Their first experiment was with a

Monastery Replica Provides Aura of Tibet on Staten Island

By Rick Hampson The Associated Press

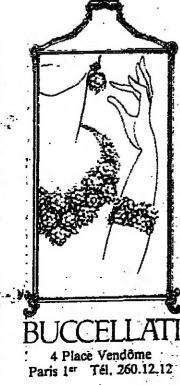

NEW YORK — Jacqueline Klanber, who had never been to Asia, decided to build a replica of a Tibetan Buddhist monastery to house her Tibetan art collection. She knew the kind of site she wanted: hilly, isolated, tranquil.

She found it on Staten Island. "She wanted to create a totally self-contained Tibetan environ-ment here on Lighthouse Hill," said Rod Preiss, assistant director of the museum Klauber founded. The Jacques Marchais Center for Tibetan Art is believed to be the only museum in the Western Hemisphere devoted to Tibetan art.

Klauber, who used the name Jacques Marchais, "was planning to go to Tibet herself, but she wanted to establish this museum first," Preiss said. However, she died in 1948 at 56, six months after her museum was finished.

The center's buildings, terrace and garden sit on the side of a steep hill, isolated from the rest of its residential neighborhood by stone walls and thick foliage. The complex offers a view, framed by pines, of lower New York Harbor. Klauber endowed her monastery with everything Tibetan — from orange trees to dogs, including a huge mastiff and a tiny Lhasa Apso. The grounds contain statues of Buddha, as well as figures of elephants, carp and baboons. There is a lotus pond and sever-

7 Leading U.S. Economists Take Dim View of Deficits

By LEONARD SILK

New York Times Service EW YORK - One of the public's main complaints about economists is over the dissension among them. Periodically, individual economists seek to refute the charge, saying that agreements within the profession are vastly greater and more important than the disagreements.

Seven former chairmen of the Council of Economic Advisers, who have served both Republican and Democratic presidents, have just issued a joint statement expressing their deep concern about the size of the projected deficits in the federal budget for the next several years.

The seven — Walter W. Heiler, Gardner Ackley, Paul W. McCracken, Alan Greenspan, Charles L. Schultze, Murray L. Weidenbaum and Martin S.
Feldstein — declared; "De-

We are of one mind about fundamental spite our different views on some matters, as professional economists we are of one mind about the fundamental dangers which the continued existence of such deficits poses for the nation. Most se-dangers posed by massive spending' riously, continued federal deficits of the amounts now projected would erode the long-term vitality and stability of the nation's economy. Even in the nearer term, however, the persistence of massive federal borrowing during a period of economic expansion can bring in its train mounting risks to the maintenance of economic stability at home and in the world economy."

The group said that, "as a practical matter," it would be difficult to restore budgetary balance without some contribution from each of four elements: reductions in the rate of growth of "mandatory" entitlement programs such as Social Security and Medicare; reductions in other domestic spending; scaling back

Medicare; reductions in other domestic spending; scaling back the increase in military spending, and a tax increase.
Various combinations of these four elements could do the job, they said, adding that they did not agree among themselves "on the best mix." The choice would involve many values, a number outside the domain of economics, and "like any group of citizens our value structures differ," they added.
But Herbert Stein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under President Richard M. Nixon, refused to sign the tratement, because he did not think military spending should be statement, because he did not think military spending should be cut. In an article in The AEl Economist, published by the American Enterprise Institute, Mr. Stein contended that any military cutbacks would weaken national security and he would not risk that "in order to increase private consumption in America in 1990 by another 2 or 3 percent."

ECOGNIZING that virtually no one who calls for military cutbacks says he or she wants weaker forces, Mr. Stein said that almost all insist they want to get the same forces cheaper. But, he argued, stretching out military programs would provide less security in the years immediately ahead and waste could not be eliminated without reducing military strength. "The most prudent assumption," he said, "is that if the defense budget is cut from $300 billion to $270 billion, to be allocated by the same organizations and people as at present, with the same incentives, we will get about the same proportions of strength and waste from the $270 billion as we would have got from the $300 billion" - that is, less waste and also less strength.

However, William W. Kanfman, a military expert at the Massachuseris Institute of Technology, disputes the proposition, apparently accepted by Mr. Stein, that increased military spending automatically leads to increased military strength.

In an analysis, "The 1986 Defense Budget," just published by the Brookings Institution, Mr. Kaufman concludes: "Too many programs are being funded too rapidly. Duplication is excessive, and the misallocation of funds is such that carrier battle groups (Confirmed on Page 11, Col. 4)

Wholesale Prices Up In U.S.

Consumer Debt Rises to Record

Compiled by Ow Staff Fram Dispatcher NEW YORK — Prices at the wholesale level edged up 0.2 percent in March and climbed at an annual rate of only 0.3 percent through the first quarter, the Labor Department said Friday.

Separately, the Federal Reserve Board reported that U.S. consumers added a record $10.4 billion to their installment loans outstanding in February. The increase meant that credit expanded at an annual rate of 27.1 percent in February, just slightly less than the record high rate in May 1984, when the economy was expanding at a blis-

And in another report, the Com-merce Department said sales of manufactured goods rose 0.2 percent in February following a 0.6percent decline the previous month. However, inventories rose twice as fast as sales in February, expanding 0.4 percent.

On prices, the Labor Department said that wholesale inflation as measured by the Producer Price Index climbed 0.3 percent over the past year, the smallest 12-month inflation rate in 20 years. The March rise followed a 0.1- percent decline in February; prices were inchanged in January.

Last month's increase came despite declines in prices for gasoline and food, and food costs slipped 0.2 percent despite a 16.7-percent gain in vegetable prices.

For the first three months of the year, prices were up just 0.3 per-cent, at an annual rate, Indeed, that rate held true for the last year as a whole and was the lowest since a 0.1-percent rate for the 12 months ending in January 1965.

A 0.8-percent gasoline price decline was the product of the Labor Department's seasonal adjustment process, designed to remove pre-dictable, periodic influences from price activity. Without the adjustment, prices at the pump actually rose 1.7 percent.

Analysis, however, expect pump prices to begin falling before long as pressure builds from the world-

In fact, many analysts predict inflation for all of 1985 could be as low as 2 percent, only a slight dete-rioration from the 1.8-percent gain recorded in 1984. That performance, combined with a minuscule 0.6-percent increase in 1983, gave the United States its best back-to-back infla-Meanwhile, the Fed said 37 per-

The skyrocketing pace of borrowing can be both a sign of consumer optimism and a cause for concern among some economists, who see the possibility growing of a sudden cutback in borrowing and spending further down the road.

The Commerce Department, meanwhile, said the February gain in sales of manufactured goods was led by a 1.6-percent rise in retail sales. Retail inventories, 27.6 percent of the total, grew 0.8 percent despite the February sales gain.
The trend suggested that retail inventories may have backed up even faster in March when sales dropped 1.9 percent, the steepest piunge in more than seven years.

warehouses, on shelves and in factories, up from 1.32 a year earlier. In an earlier report, the Fed re-ported Thursday that the nation's basic money supply rose $1.9 billion in late March. (AP, UPI).

Nixdorf Shines in European Market

But Its Moves In the U.S. Are Less Fruitful

By Warren Getler International Herald Tribune
PADERBORN, West Germany - Nixdorf Computer AG has become a model for West German companies trying to keep pace with technology. It has achieved this status although its profit increases have trailed its sales gains and it has had prob-lems breaking into the U.S. mar-

But profits remain strong.
Group profit figures for 1984 have yet to be released, but the company has said that net profit was considerably above the 93.65 million Deutsche marks ($30.2 million) of 1983. Parent company 1984 profit, Nixdorf said Friday, jumped 63 percent, to 114.1 million DM from 70 million DM a year earlier, Nixdorf also said it would leave its 9-DM dividend unchanged. While other West German companies have lost ground because of slowness in moving products to the market, Nixdorf has shown the gains to be had by moving fast in generating new technology and adapting it to customer needs,

Evidence of the growing respect for the West German dataprocessing group in Europe was the presence of Heinz Nixdorf, the company's 60-year-old founder and chairman, on a recent U.S.-West German panel in Frankfurt discussing trade relations between the two countries.

Mr. Nixdorf asserted to his American counterparts, including several congressmen, that the notion of West Germany suffering from a "technology gap" was a gross generalization. He sug-gested that the huge U.S. trade deficit may reflect a lack of tech-nological competitiveness among American companies themselves. But it is obvious that Nixdorf has a long haul ahead before it can establish itself as a widely recognized company in the crowded U.S. data-processing market.

Several computer-industry analysts at major brokerages in New York admitted to being un-familiar with Nixdorf when asked to comment about the company's U.S. presence. "Nix-dorf has not been tremendously successful in the U.S.," said Don Haback who follows Nixdorf and other European computer companies for the U.S. investment house, Smith Barney.

"But then none of the European computer companies have had much success here. Despite good servicing networks. Nix-dorf has not been able offer any real uniqueness here in its product line or pricing that has been particularly competitive." Nixdorf's share of the small business computer market in the United States has been about 1 percent in recent years, analysts say.

However, outside of the giant electronics group Siemens AG, few major West German companies engaged in computers and data processing have displayed the innovation and staying pow-er of Nixdorf in international competition.

Nixdorf — with a work force that has grown to 20,200 from 10,000 in the past six years -has been able to maintain the largest share of the home market in desktop business computers. According to statistics provided by Quantum Science Corp., a U.S. consulting group. Nixdorf had 15 percent of the West German market in 1983 shipments of business computers in the $25,000-to-$100,000 price category, followed by International Business Machines Corp., with a 13-percent share. In the $100,000-to-$200,000 range, Nixdorf widened its dominance to a 23-percent market share in 1983, from 9 percent for IBM. Figures for 1984 have yet to be released, but analysis believe that Nixdorf was able to maintain its share of the domestic market and, in some areas, may have expanded its edge.

In Europe, Nixdorf's share of the market for small business computers is put by market researchers at about 6 percent in 1983, reflecting, analysts say, the fact that a growing sector of European industry and government prefers to buy from "indigenous" makers.

Nakasone Says Quota Decision Was an 'Error'

Compiled in Our Stuff From Disputches TOKYO - Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone said Friday that his decision to raise the quota of Japanese auto exports to the United States was an "error of judg-ment" that resulted from a misreading of potential American

Also on Friday, Japan's Ministry of International Trade and Industry announced a five-point plan to increase foreign imports of manu-factured products, and Minister Keijiro Murata appealed to Japanese consumers to buy more foreign goods.

A news release from the ministry said it would call on 60 leading Japanese companies, including automobile, electronic and machin ery manufacturers, trading houses, department stores and supermarkets, to make special efforts to promote imports. Among the 60 companies are Toyota Motor Corp., Nippon Steel Corp., Matsushita Electric Industrail Co., Sony Corp. Mitsubishi Co. and Mitsui and Co., ministry officials said.

The five-point plan also provides for import fairs, conferences for foreigners doing business in Japan, the expansion of trade in certain products, upgrading financial aid to importers and a publicity campaign on buying foreign goods.

The government announced on March 28 that auto shipments for the fiscal year beginning April I would be 2.3 million, a 24.3-percent increase from the 1.85 million sent in fiscal 1984, when Japanese automakers were still under voluntary restraint on exports to the United States.

Mr. Nakasone, speaking at a luncheon, told foreign journalists, "With the benefit of hindsight, maybe we should have studied the situation more in advance. But we hope it is understood that we acted in sincerity and good faith."

He called the decision to boost exports to the United States an "error in judgment about the attitude in the United States."

The U.S. Congress, angered by Japan's $36.8-billion trade surplus last year and what it perceived as Japanese cars flooding the U.S. market, subsequently passed a non-binding resolution to retaliate if Japan refused to open its markets to more American competition.

Preliminary figures released Friday by Japan's Finance Ministry said the country's customs-cleared trade surplus widened to $3,17 billion in March, a 34-percent increase from the $2,36 billion in February and a slight decrease from $3,19 billion a year earlier.

The customs-cleared trade surplus in the year ended March 31, 1985, rose 50 percent to a record $35.07 billion from the previous record of $23.33 billion a year earli-

Japan's exports to the United States rose 30.1 percent in 1984-85 to $60.78 billion, while imports from the U.S. rose 4.9 percent to $26.95 billion, giving Japan a surplus of $33.83 billion.

Mr. Nakasone's remarks were made three days after the government's announcement of a new package of measures designed to liberalize Japanese markets for foreign products in telecommunications, electronics, pharmaceuticals and medical equipment, and wood

The auto export issue, which has been dealt with separately in the past five years, was not a part of that program.

Mr. Nakasone said Japan should not have specified a new quota, but rather should have "observed the situation" to make sure that the lifting of the voluntary restraints

By Warren Gerler

rnational Herald Tribuni FRANKFURT - Daimler-Benz AG's bid for control of Dornier GmbH, West Germany's second largest aviation group, faces stiff opposition from within the ranks of the Dornier family. The bid by Stuttgart-based Daimler threatens to drive a decisive wedge between the already split family members, who own 100 percent of Dornier. # More Failures of Small Securities Firms Predicted

The recent failures of two governments ernment securities dealers - ESM Government Securities Inc. of Fort Lauderdale, Florida, and Bevill, Bresler & Schulman Asset Manage-ment Corp. of Livingston, New Jersey - caused hundreds of millions of dollars of losses, mainly at municipalities and savings and loan associations.

Both companies allegedly used vernment securities they were holding for customers for their own purposes, the Securities and Ex-change Commission has charged. The lawyer representing the trustee for BB&S Asset Management Corp., which was closed Monday, said Thursday that the firm's collapse was precipitated by BB&S customers demanding securities the firm didn't have. Nathan Ravin, lawyer for trustee Saul S. Cohen, said customers began contacting Asset Management Corp. and seeking possession of their collateral after the failure of ESM, which triggered losses of more than $300 million after it failed March 4. "Any other government-securi-ties firms that fail will have had to have engaged in practices similar to" the ones the SEC alleges that ESM and Bevill, Bresler engaged in, said the chief financial officer of

Union Oil Group Sues Mesa Head

LOS ANGELES — Union Oil Co.'s Retirement Plan Committee filed suit Friday in federal court in New York charging that T. Boone Pickens Jr., chairman of Mesa Petroleum Co., was running his oil company as an unlicensed investment firm in violation of federal laws.

Earlier this week, Mr. Pickens launched a hostile $54-a-share cash tender offer for 64 million Unocal shares, which would give his investment group a controlling stake in the Los Angeles oil company. His partnership already owns 13.4 percent of Unocal's stock.

Unocal, the parent of Union Oil, sued Mr.

Bankruptcies Rise in Japan

TOKYO - Corporate bankruptcies in Japan rose to a record 20.363 in the fiscal year ended March 31, 1985, from the previous record of 19,959 a year earlier, the Tokyo Commerce and Industry Research Co. reported Friday.

Pickens on Thursday in federal court in Shreveport. Louisiana, on the grounds that his take-over attempts breach antitrust law. The New York and Louisiana suits both seek to have the courts stop Mr. Pickens from pursu-ng his bid to seize control of Unocal. ing his bid to seize control of Unocal:

Several Meso shareholders, including the Unocal chairman, Fred Hartley, and other members of Unocal's Retirement Plan Committee, allege in the suit filed in U.S. district court in Manhattan that Mesa is operating as an unregistered investment company in violation of the Investment Company Act of 1940. The suit also charges that Mesa Petroleum, founded by Mr. Pickets and hased in Amarillo. Texas is en-Pickens and based in Amarillo, Texas, is engaged in unlawful transactions with its affiliates, including the tender offer for Unocal shares.

A meeting between the steelmaker and its largest creditor, Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., was scheduled in New York on Friday to discuss the company's $514-million debt, Paul Rusen, di-rector of United Steelworkers District 23, said.

Mr. Rusen confirmed that Dennis J. Carney, chairman of Wheelnis J. Carney, chairman of Wheeling-Pittsburgh, had scheduled a Monday board meeting to consider the "serious financial condition of the company." Wheeling-Pittsburgh has threatened to file for protection if it cannot refinance its loans and obtain additional con-cessions from the union.

Porsche Reports First-Half Profit

STUTTGART - Porsche, the West German automaker, said Friday that it made a profit in the first half of the current year ending

July 31, but that sales fell 5.3 percent from the year-earlier period. The company gave no profit figure for the first half or forecast for the full year. But it said it expects to meet its 1984/85 targets of selling 50,000 cars and raising turnover to 3 billion Deutsche marks (about $952.5 million). The target compares with 1983/84 sales of just under 44,000 cars and volume of 2.5 Billion.

The positive first-half result was the result of high capacity use, good sales in the United States and a favorable dollar-mark exchange rate, the company said.

Douglas, China Agree on Airliners

The Associated Press

LONG BEACH, California — Douglas And craft Co. said Friday that China has agreed by buy 26 MD-80 series airliners and has an option to purchase another 15 in a transaction that could exceed $1 billion.

The licensed production arrangement is the first between a U.S. aircraft manufacturer and China, said Douglas, a unit of $t. Louis-based McDonnell Douglas Corp. It also calls for Chinese workers to be trained in the United States; All but one of the twin-engine planes would be delivered partially assembled to China for final assembly there.

The value of the agreement was not an nounced, but Dave Eastman, a Douglas spokesman, said "the substantial majority" of the work would be performed by Douglas and its subcontractors.

Completed MD-80 series airliners cost about $1.02 billion.

The agreement follows six years of negonal transactions.

would cost $1.02 billion.

The agreement follows six years of negotiations between Douglas, Shanghai Aviation Industrial Corp. and China Aviation Supply Corp., the procurement subsidiary of China's Civil Aviation General Administration.

"It will modernize China's air transportations and it expands the market potential for Douglas," said Jim Worsham, president of Douglas, "It's a mutally beneficial partnership with super possibilities for the future."

"We've come to know the people [in the Shanghai agency], as expert technicians and Shanghai agency] as expert technicians and careful craftsmen," he said.

China has operated two MD-80s since December 1983. The partially assembled MD-80s planes will be delivered to Shanghai between 1986 and 1991, with the first of the airliners.

expected to go into service in 1987.

French GDP Up

The Associated Press PARIS - France's gross domessic product grew at an infla-tion-adjusted annual rate of 1.6 percent last year compared with a 0.6-percent rise in 1983, the National Statistics Insulate re-

The government had estimated in February that the GDP, which measures a country's total output of goods and services, minus income from operations abroad, expanded at a 2-percent rate last year. It said the reason for the downward revision in the latest figures was that the February estimate was based on incomplete fourth-

The agency said household consumption rose 0.5 percent last year, unchanged from 1983. The weak rise was attributed to an erosion of consumer purchasing power following eco-nomic-austerity measures.

holds a 30-percent market share in Europe for computerized-banking equipment. That puts it about even, he said, with its major competitor, IBM.

"Nixdorl's slogan of 'We sell solutions' has been very effective," said Chris Heslop, an analyst at IDC Europa Ltd., a computer con-age; that has given them a good

The strategy at Nixdorf is not one of focusing entirely on devel-opment of new products but rather combining existing computer and software systems with the company's digital, computer-controlled telephone switching systems.

transmit voice signals, but in the future we're going to be able to transmit voice, data, graphics and word-processing functions through PABX," Mr. Luft said.

Nixdorf expects a huge market opening up for its switching systems as various governments, including West Germany's, prepare to digitalize their telephone networks. The company currently sells

The Associated Press .. CHICAGO — First Chicago Corp., the 10th largest U.S. bank holding company, said Friday that first-quarter earnings fell 23 percent, principally because it took a $15.8-million writedown on an investment in a Brazilian bank. It was the first major banking company to report a decline in first-quarter earnings. Three others — J.P. Morgan & Co. Inc., Chemigai New York Corp. and Marine relidiand Banks Inc. -posted profit gains earlier this week. First Chicago, the parent of First National Bank of Chicago, said it earned $38.3 million, or 65 cents a share, in the three months ended March 31, compared with a profit of $49.8 million, or 97 cents a share, a year earlier.

MARTIN AMIS intrudes amiably into his novel as a sardonic deus ex machina to its hapless protagonist and narrator. At one point, he even refers to being a novelist who is a novelist's son. So it doesn't seem unfair to point out a mark or two of kinship between "Money" and Kingsley Amis'

"One Fat Englishman."

Both focus the infirmity by means of a fat English slob who tries to get his hooks into the infirmity and ends up steamrollered. Both find a sliver of moral superiority — as does the narrator of Graham

Greene's "The Quiet American" - in the humane amateurishness of their own skulduggery as opposed to the sleek American juggernant. In the teeth of the Roman soldiery, their English anti-heroes model themselves not on Christ but on the thieves;

The story is fairly slim, although various bits of deliberate mystification and possibly non-deliberate suzziness tend to make it seem bigger, or at least longer. Self's skill at making short films has caught the eye of Fielding, an American promoter. He quits his partnership in his London agency and is whizzed > Self is a creature of fitful energy, occasional violence and large but futile appetites. He will talk back to a racist New York cabbie — and get thrown out on the street for his pains - and spend days in bed nursing a collection of ailments. He const vast amounts of junk food and drinks endlessly. Then he throws up, almost as endlessly. At times, 'Money" seems to be a novel about hydrostatics. He is obsessed with sex, much of it in the form of pornography and auto-eroticism.

The transatlantic pillaging of what remains of human values by the confemporary big-deal is the serious theme of this book, verging on the petulant at times, and cast in the mold of black comedy. Self's London neighborhood is becoming a wilderness of fast-food joints. As a maker of commercials, Self recognizes his part in it. "My way is coming up in the world," he says. He is not the innocent corrupted, but a small-boat sleaze navigator caught in a tidal wave. Amis puts enormous energy into paradying almost everything in sight. Fielding the American promoter, is both laid-back and fanatically fit, an expansive corsair who turns out to be a shriveled expansive corsair who hurns out to be a shriveled and half-mad fraud. A gorgeous film star practices sex as a mind-expanding experience with each lower getting one night and the whole thing videotaped for her library. The small-time crookedness of Self's London film partners is delightfully done: Everything goes on the expense account, including a poodle that is listed as "Security — guard dog."

But Amis's strength is wit rather than comedy. There is a good deal of genuinely successful satire in the book, particularly in the portrayal of New York obsessions, but it is displaced by the excessive space and energy spent on its narrator. Self is a mess. Sometimes he is a funny mess, and occasionally he is an interesting mess, but he dilutes himself in a flood of drinking, spewing and endless high-pressure language. He is larger than life but emptier, as well, and his emptiness crowds his wit and our interest.

.GM-Toyota Suit Is Settled The Associated Press

TOKYO — Chrysler Corp. said Friday that an out-of-court settlement had been reached in its lawsuit objecting to a plan by General Motors Corp. and Toyota Motor Corp. to build Toyota-designed small cars in California.

Chrysler had protested the 1983 agreement between General Motors, the world's largest automaker, and Toyota, Japan's largest, as a threat to fair competition in the U.S. auto market. The announcement said the settlement stipulated that the period of "active cooperation" would be reduced from 12 to eight years.

Capitals Win 2d in Overtime, But Islanders Claim a Push

WASHINGTON -- It was a war of attrition and the Washington Capitals won it. Mike Garmer came out from behind the New York Islanders' net and shoved the puck past goalie Kelly Hrudey at 1:23 of a second overtime period to give the Capitals a 2-1 victory Thursday night. Long after the Capitals had departed, the Islanders still were on the ice screaming at referee Don Koharski and insisting Greg Ad-ams had interfered with Hrudey. New York Coach Al Arbour oushed Koharski and was assessed a game misconduct penalty "for striking an official," according to the supervisor of officials, Frank The third game of the playoff is set for Saturday at Nassau Coliseum with the Capitals holding a 2-0 lead in the series, both games decided in overtime. Elsewhere, Minnesota, Philadelphia, Edmonton, Winnipeg Que-bec and Chicago took 2-0 leads,

Flyers 3, Rangers 1
In Philadelphia, rookie Todd
Bergen scored twice and goaltender Pelle Lindbergh made 38 saves against the suddenly tough Rangers, whom the Flyers beat seven straight times during the season en route to the NHL's best record. Bergen got the winning goal at 5:23 of the final period when Brad Marsh's slapshot was deflected to him in the slot and he fired it past goalie Glen Hanlon.

Ilkka Sinisalo ensured victory with a 15-foot shot at 17:40. "It's kind of surprising that the puck keeps going in the way it does for me," said Bergen, "The harder I try to set up the other guys the more I score.

Oilers 4, Kings 2 In Edmonton, Alberta, Paul Cofley scored in the first period for the defending Stanley Cup champions, but the visitors tied it on a second-period goal by Dave Taylor. The Oilers took charge with their usual quick-striking offense early in the final session, Mark Napier and Mike Krushelmyski scoring 42 seconds apart. Napier pounced on a loose puck and slid it into the net and Krushelnyski made it 3-1, converting a pass in front from Wayne Gretzky after some fine corner work by Jari Kurri. Kurri later scored into an empty net. Jets 5, Flames 2

In Winnipeg Scott Arniel's goal at 9:21 began a three-goal third period for the Jets, who carry their lead into the Calgary Saddledome where they have never won.

The winning goal came after ex-cellent forechecking by the line of Thomas Steen, Perry Turnbull and Arniel, who flipped a backhand shot over goaltender Reggie Lemelin. Laurie Boschman scored on a breakaway with 1:22 left and Ron Wilson into an empty net at 19:13. Dale Hawerchuk and Doug

Holmes Wants a Fight With Spinks

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Larry Holmes, who now wants to top Rocky Marciano's heavyweight record of 49-0 rather than retire, said Thursday, he has signed for between $2.5 million and $3 million to fight light heavyweight champion Michael Spinks. But Spinks has not signed, and the match already has run into problems.

NBC wants to televise the fight in prime time Monday night, May 20, at a site to be determined. Promoter Butch Lewis, who has guided the unbeaten Spinks' career, said Spinks needs more time and added, "I'mgoing to tell" Holmes, whose record is 47-0, that "I can deliver the money, the site and Spinks for June or July."

Sam Shem Novels: Medicine for the Funny Bone

By Sandy Rovner

Washington Post Service
WASHINGTON — "Fine" is his new book, a funny, sensitive, even adventurous account of the metamorphosis of a resident in psychiatry, but Samuel Shem will always be known to U.S. medical students, interns and residents primarily as the author of "The House of God."

A sort of "Animal House" with substance, a less preachy "M*A*S*H," this cult classic has been read as studiously as Gray's Anatomy by virtually every student in any English-speaking medical school since it was published in 1978. It has sold well over a million copies, and even now, seven years later, it sells 300 copies a day.

"It's gotten so that you haven't gone to med school if you haven't read 'House of God,' " said a bioethics professor.

Sam Shem — a pseudonym is a physician and psychiatris who duated from Harvard Medical School, thinly disguised in "The House of God" as BMS, or Best Medical School, BMS is affiliated with the House of God, a hospital "founded in 1913 by the American People of Israel when their medically qualified Sons and Daughters could not get good internships in good hospitals because of discrimination."

Shem interned at Beth Israel Hospital in Boston and describes it as "the worst year of my life." That he went to medical school at all is due at least in part to his freshman English composition instructor at Harvard.

He really liked the idea of writing, and be turned in his first composition with something of a sense of destiny. "I worked on it like hell," he recalled. "After all, it was my first grade I was going to get at Harvard. When I got it back from the woman there wasn't a mark on the paper, and down at the bottom in little letters in red ink was 'See me.' "

He went to her office. "I said, 'What is it?' and she said, 'This is too terrible to grade. This is be-neath F, " Shem recalled. "I was beartbroken. She never could tell me what was wrong, but she kept on giving me D's and D-minuses. I figured, here she is a grad student in English and she must know what she was doing. So all through Harvard, I never tried to write again. I was crushed. "Later on I found out that there were only two people in the class who got A's. One of them was the son of a famous writer. The other was the captain of the freshman golf team. He was sleeping with her. I was on the golf team, too. and he told me."

He paused, And sighed, "I'd love to find that woman today." But that was around the time Sam Shem got into cockroaches. Cockroaches and golf got him a Rhodes scholarship, and when he returned from Balliol College at Oxford three years later he went to medical school.

The Thirteenth Law of the House of God: The delivery of med-ical care is to do as much nothing as

I'm not saying that's right, but that's the only way to preserve your own sanity. "House of God' has the sort of humor that keeps you going. If you can't laugh at it, you'll cry. And if you cry, you won't make

At House of God, the chief resident, known as the Fat Man, teaches the young intern the rules and the ways to "buff" and "turf." Buffing a chart is to make it look as though something has been done for a patient when, in fact, the Thirteenth Law has been followed to the letter. As for turfing:

"My first very own patient was a LOL in NAD [little old lady in no apparent distress] in need of a checkup and a prescription for a new artificial breast and padded bra with fillable pockets. Who knew how to write a prescription? Not me. She wrote it, I signed it. . . . Next was a Portuguese woman who wanted me to do something about her corns. Who knew about corns? I toyed with the idea of writing her a prescription for an artificial foot and a padded shoe with fillable socks, but then I remembered the Fat Man and turfed her to podiatry."

Doing any "nothing" is anathema to the medico-political hierarchy that runs not only House of God but also BMS and the Mount St. Elsewheres, the community hospitals in which patients are often dumped. The term "St. Elsewhere," created by Shem, so quickly became part of the medical vernacular that spokesmen for MTM Enterprises, which produces the TV program "St. Else-where," swear that the phrase was just plucked out of the air, that it had been a part of the medical argot forever.

The Third Law: At a cardiac arrest, the first procedure is to take vour own pulse.
